

Faith McNeill is the Program Manager for the Montgomery County Volunteer Center. With more than ten years of professional experience working with local communities and non-profits, Faith understands the power of people and how important it is to connect, build, and empower others. Her dedication to helping others started at an early age volunteering through church and Girl Scouts in her hometown of Greensboro, North Carolina. Faith is passionate about public service, building communities, and using resources wisely.

Faith graduated from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill where she earned a degree in Psychology and African American Studies. After college Faith relocated to Maryland to serve as an AmeriCorps volunteer with City Year, DC followed by a second year of service with Public Allies, DC. Dynamic in her role as an AmeriCorps volunteer, Faith was able to build lifelong relationships, inspire countless youth, and begin her professional public leadership career. During her time in Montgomery County, Faith has worked with the Montgomery County Conservation Corps and the Latin American Youth Center where she led efforts to provide meaningful workforce development opportunities and wrap around services to Montgomery County youth.

Faith is a demonstrated leader who values opportunities to work collaboratively toward innovative solutions. Many describe her as a person who isn't afraid to get her hands dirty. In her spare time, Faith loves a good "Do It Yourself" project, and any opportunity to learn a new skill. Faith also enjoys participating in outdoor recreational activities and has been a Montgomery County resident for seven years.
