Katherine Asals' feedback session testimonial

Michael, that feedback session was a very helpful and stimulating discussion for me. I was feeling pretty lost with my images - happy, but stumbling around without much direction.

Now I feel like I can see patterns in my work more clearly, and my imagination about where I can take things has been opened up wide. Now there is a direction. I can't wait to get back to work on my stuff....also, I think your suggestion to write about what's behind my photos is another way of engaging on a deeper level, and of continuing to find the threads running through things.

I could imagine doing another session some months down the line when I've been able to pursue a few concepts that materialized while you analyzed my photos.

You definitely have a gift for being gentle and supportive, yet frank and very real. You are good at helping people find or recognize their vision - I can now see how that works. You were indeed careful not to close any doors, yet still able to draw attention to what is strongest or most original.

Thanks so much for the follow up summary with all the informative links you emailed me today - I suspect I could use a bit of guidance when it comes to finishing and presenting my photographs.
