

December 8, 2020

Honorable Mayor and Members of the City Council,

I'm pleased to share with you the next steps of the search process to select the next Dallas Police Chief, which – despite being all-virtual to slow the spread of COVID-19 – is nearing successful completion.

As you will recall, we began in October by soliciting proposals from qualified and experienced executive search firms to conduct a national search. Through a competitive process, Gary Peterson with Public Sector Search and Consulting was selected to lead the search based on his vast experience in conducting Police Chief searches in dozens of municipalities including Nashville, Sacramento, Seattle and San Francisco.

Once selected, Mr. Peterson first met with the Mayor and members of the City Council to solicit their input and feedback on the qualities and characteristics desired in the next Chief. This information was used to create a candidate profile for the recruitment brochure. The City Council Public Safety Committee received monthly briefings regarding the search process beginning in October and the recruitment officially began in early November.

On November 5, we also launched a community-wide survey in both English and Spanish to seek community and public feedback on the next Chief. We were pleased to have received over 4,500 responses from residents.

To close the digital divide, we also set up a phone line to receive community input in English or Spanish; we received calls from 23 numbers with only 2 providing feedback. Finally, an internal survey was also conducted; we received more than 1,000 responses from the men and women from the Dallas Police Department.

The results of the community survey are attached, and the following general themes emerged:

- Desired Qualifications include a track record of reducing crime, building trust and having an open and transparent leadership style. Experience recruiting and retaining quality personnel and understanding the history of policing in the US, including racism and bias were essential.
- Priorities for the Department include reducing violent crime, holding officers/staff accountable, building trust and strengthening community partnerships.
- Leadership Qualities included an individual who is honest and has integrity, someone who will hold employees accountable, problem solving ability and is strategic thinker.

City of Dallas

As of today, 36 people from across the United States applied for the position and were screened by recruiter Mr. Peterson based on the input from the City Council, community and department surveys, and the City Manager. Later this week, the City Manager will invite selected top candidates to participate in the interview phase of the process, which is scheduled to begin next week. To solicit a broad spectrum of additional input on the finalists, the interview process includes six stakeholder panels which will meet and interview each candidate. Organizations representing various community and stakeholder groups were invited by the City Manager to provide a representative to sit on one of the following six panels. A complete list of invited organizations is attached.

- Neighborhood and Business
- Faith Based and Non-Profit
- Police Oversight and Cultural Diversity
- Police Oversight and Law Enforcement Partners
- Police Employee Associations
- City Executive Staff

Additionally, the Chair of the City Council Public Safety Committee has requested from the Mayor and City Council Members questions to ask each finalist in video interviews which Mr. Peterson will capture to make available to the City Council and the public. The recorded interviews will premiere live across all City of Dallas cable and social media channels next week.

Following the community surveys, stakeholder panels and video interviews, the City Manager will select final candidates for interviews that he will conduct personally. The City Manager intends to select and appoint a new Chief by the end of December.

The next monthly briefing on the search process is scheduled for the December Public Safety Committee Meeting this Monday, December 14 at which time Mr. Peterson and staff will be available to answer any questions about the process.

Should you have any questions, please reach out to myself or Assistant City Manager, Jon Fortune.

In the Spirit of Excellence!!

Introduction

For the past several years, police leaders have faced intense scrutiny around the use of force, accountability and transparency. Many communities are asking for opportunities to participate in the process to select their next police chief. In Dallas, Public Sector Search & Consulting, working with the City Manager's Office and Human Resources, developed a search process structured around the values of inclusiveness and transparency. As part of the search process, we engaged the community by encouraging Dallas residents to provide feedback in several areas. The survey results will be used to inform the selection process.

Methodology

The survey was developed and published, in both English and Spanish, on the City's website and sent to multiple listservs, posted on social media and sent via email. Residents were broadly invited to participate in this survey.

The survey was open for response collection from November 5th to December 1st. The survey was comprised of eleven (11) questions and gathered information on qualifications, priorities and leadership qualities expected from the new Chief of Police, as well as respondents' level of trust in the DPD. Respondents also volunteered demographic information, including gender, race or ethnicity, age, residential and/or work location in Dallas by zip code.

Participants were also given an opportunity to provide their thoughts on what the city manager should consider when selecting the next Chief of Police. English and Spanish survey responses are reported together in the survey results.

Survey Analysis

Survey Monkey reports response choices by number and percentage. Questions with multiple response choices are distinguished and presented in rank order. We reviewed the rankings and briefly summarized below:

Desired Qualifications include a track record of reducing crime, building trust and having an open and transparent leadership style. Experience recruiting and retaining quality personnel and understanding the history of policing in the US, including racism and bias, were seen as essential and outranked implementing innovative police practices and having prior police chief experience.

Priorities include reducing violent crime, holding officers/staff accountable, building trust and strengthening police community partnerships. Staying within budget, traffic safety/enforcement and solutions to homelessness were seen as lower priorities.

Strong Leadership Qualities are consistently identified as the most important attributes required to manage a complex police agency that will ensure fair and equal treatment under the law. Effective police leadership is multifaceted. Survey respondents selected the leadership qualities they believe are most important when selecting the next Chief of Police. The top response was an individual who is honest and has integrity, followed by someone who will hold employees accountable. Other responses included emergency management experience, problem-solving ability, being fair and even-handed, and a strategic thinker.
