

Upon my arrival at the Animal Care facility on Tuesday the 11th, I found that they did indeed have one of the chicks. It was M49, a female named JoJo. We had a powerful weather front, with strong winds, move through Fort Wayne on Monday the 10th, so we suspect that while stretching her wings, JoJo was swept up in a powerful wind current and, thankfully, landed in a semi-protected area.

JoJo was immediately taken to Pine Valley Veterinary Clinic to see Dr. Funnell who, upon examination, found her to be at a good weight and with no injuries. Radiographs were also taken and were within normal limits. Having a clean bill of health, JoJo was picked up and immediately transported back to the AEP Building, where we were escorted to the roof and greeted by Moxie and Jamie who sounded quite anxious to have their wandering youngster back. Upon reuniting with her parents, JoJo was more than happy to tell Mom and Dad about her displeasure with the events of the previous 24 hours!
