

DC Teens Looks Ahead

Wrapping up another successful science-filled year, DC Teens are looking forward to reconvening in the next school year. They also are hoping to welcome new members to join them in making a difference in their communities through science, technology, and fun!

For those unfamiliar with DC Teens, it is an educational service club for teenagers that explores and creates science-based activities and programs. Members receive training to help them share science with others and earn community service credit for volunteer hours. They learn new skills and develop leadership abilities.

DC Teens meets monthly during the school year at the Goebel Adult Community Center. If you know any teens (grades 8-12) who might be interested, please contact Mathew Chuck at ml_chuck@hotmail.com.
