

BALTIMORE SCENE

Zoey Bell, 15, goddaughter and Tanelle Williams.

Brad Herling and Cheri Milrad.

Maya Eberhart and Grace Hockley with Jewish Community Center Park Heights.

Milayna McQueen, 6 gets her face painted by Shayna Glaser. KARL MERTON FERRON/STAFF PHOTOS

Tiara Matthews, from left, Larry Schugam, Kristin Zeminski and Kelly Baccala, chair of the event.

Catherine Marie, from left, William Scott and Yeshiyah Israel.

Keith "Farmer Block" Owens, from left, Tyler "TJ" Triplett and Joshua "Josh" Whitehead.

Maya Eberhart and Grace Hockley with Jewish Community Center Park Heights.

TASTE OF NORTHWEST 2025

Celebrating Northwest Baltimore

By Baltimore Sun staff

Northwest Baltimore Partnership held a family-friendly, outdoor festival celebrating Northwest Baltimore as a wonderful place to live, work, eat, and play.

Taste of Northwest was a day of fun featuring The 8 Ohms Band, YBI African Apparel Fashion Show, food trucks, craft vendors, children's activities and community resources. It was held at The Pikesville Armory.

Northwest Baltimore Partnership is a coalition of community associations, nonprofit organizations, businesses, government agencies, and faith-based institutions working collaboratively to build value from Park Circle to Pikesville, according to its website.

The 8 Ohms Band.

Patrick Taylor, Carmen Christiana and Erica Crouch with Baltimore County Office of Community Engagement.

Above and below: Scenes from the Northwest Baltimore Partnership, held at Pikesville Armory Foundation.

Keith "Farmer Block" Owens, from left, Tyler "TJ" Triplett and Joshua "Josh" Whitehead.

