GREELEY, CO – The City of Greeley Museums welcomes spring with Baby Animal Days at Centennial Village Museum, 1475 A St., Thursday, April 16 through Sunday, April 26, 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. each day.

The spring event features various baby animals such as pigs, lambs, chicks, ducks, goats and rabbits. Some of the animals reside in the museum's Centennial Barn throughout its regular season, and some of the animals are visiting just for this special event.

Greeley West Future Farmers of America Chapter provides Centennial Village Museum with the spring babies.

The annual event happens rain or shine and admission is $3 per person, ages three and older. Youth ages two and under are free.

Visitors can also enjoy wagon rides on the weekends, weather permitting.

Baby Animal Days takes place in the western portion of Centennial Village Museum and although the historical buildings are closed, visitors are welcome to meander the Village's paths, check out the museum's cell phone tour and enjoy the grounds.
