The Playground Park Revamp is a community-driven initiative with the goal of transforming Green Lake's Playground Park located by the Mill Street dam into an inclusive, accessible playground where children of all abilities can play side by side. This project began with a simple but powerful vision: to create a space that welcomes everyone - regardless of ability - and provides a fun, safe environment for all. To make this vision a reality, a grassroots organization named Playground Pals was formed with a determination to build a park that not only serves the children and families of Green Lake but also attracts visitors, helping to boost the local economy.

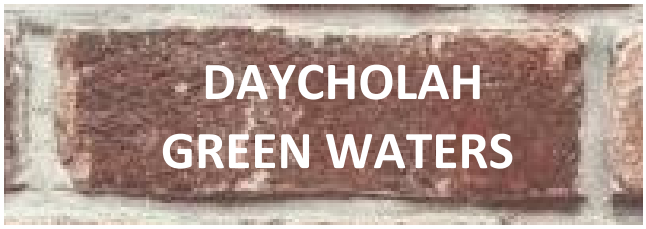

Playground Pals consists of local community members, including Amanda Castleberry, Kathy Grahn, Rachel Nitz, and Jill Williams, who share the same passion for creating a space that is accessible for all children and their families. From the start, they knew this project would require a strong community effort - both financially and through the dedication of volunteers.
