Introducing a new collaboration by Seachange and native St. John photographer Sarah Swan. This series of 4 framed prints will sell starting November 15th, with all of the proceeds to benefit C.O.R.E Foundation.

Swan is an avid surfer and diver, and a frequent volunteer with C.O.R.E.
The Caribbean Oceanic Restoration and Education Foundation is a nonprofit, tax exempt charitable organization that inspires communities to be better stewards of the environment through marine awareness education and hands-on coastal programs.

The prints are ready to hang in solid wood frames and UV anti-glare acrylic for $350 each. They can be ordered online at www.seachangevi.com and picked up at the shop in Crosswinds on St. Thomas, or shipped directly to any address in the continental U.S.

“When I began looking for art for Seachange, I wanted to carry local artists and I wanted to find artists who were not already represented in the area. I met Sarah in 2001 when she was a student at Antilles and I taught her photography class. When I saw what she is doing now, I was so impressed and knew it was the perfect fit. I love the dreamy, calming palette and I think you can really feel the deep connection she has to the ocean in her work. We are both passionate about protecting the environment and we decided we wanted the proceeds of this project to support that.” -Ginny Edwards Maxwell

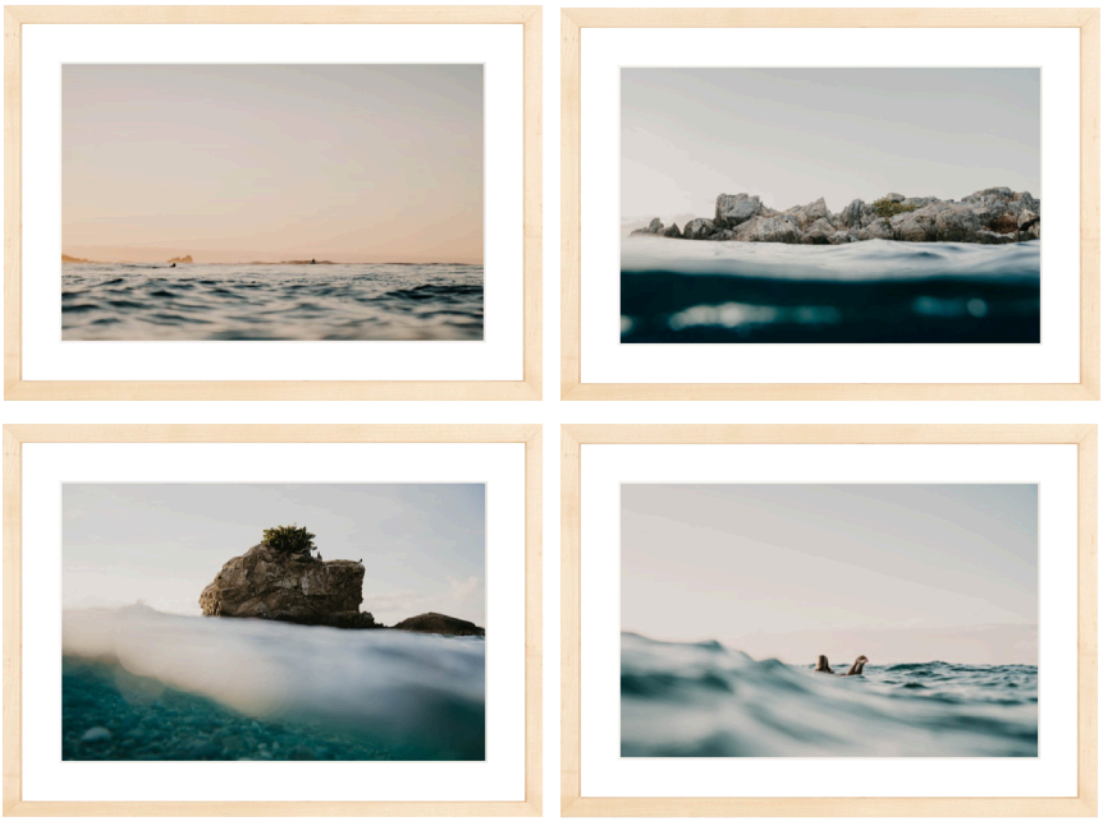

“The Ocean is my inspiration for life. The sense of adventure, strength, fear, and peace the ocean incites in me drives my creativity to share these feelings with others. Creativity that has a purpose. I want to capture and share our collective experiences while encouraging consciousness at the same time. I reckon myself more than a photographer, but also a storyteller, with the mission to respect and restore the beauty that surrounds us.” - Sarah Swan
