

Community Collaboratives

What are Community Collaboratives?

Community Collaboratives convene local partners to coordinate prevention strategies and identify service gaps, including local families, organizations, schools, providers, and community members to strengthen the support of children, youth, and families.

They are not a single agency or service provider. Instead, they serve as a community table where partners can align efforts around shared goals for children, youth, families, and community well-being.

Each collaborative helps create the local conditions for prevention by building trust, improving coordination, and strengthening support pathways.

EXAMPLES OF LOCAL PARTNERS:

- Schools and early childhood
- Health and behavioral health
- Housing and basic needs
- Economic supports
- Faith-based organizations
- Local government
- Community members and families
