The Damascus Project Courses Begin this Fall

What is the Damascus Project? A collaborative effort of the Minnesota and Wisconsin conferences to create an outcome-based, integrative, holistic approach to developing leaders

What is unique about Damascus Project courses? We are implementing an innovative approach to teaching and learning that is outcome based; grounded in the UCC's Marks for Faithful and Effective Authorized Ministers and responsive to the day to day challenges of ministry in today's world. Help us assess and improve upon this approach while also growing in faith, listening for God's call and strengthening Christ's church.

Who can take a course from the Damascus Project? Anyone – lay or ordained who is interested in deepening faith, developing or honing their leadership skills, and pondering hopeful, faith based responses to today's most pressing issues both within and outside the church

Join us on this exciting journey this fall by registering now for our first course:

Exploring God's Call in a Changing World

Rev. Dr. Sandra Graham, Facilitator and Instructor
September 15-December 8, 2018

This course will help participants learn how to fully engage in theological reflection and how to share this engagement with others. Beginning and ending with a weekend retreat, the course will also include 4 "online sessions" that focus on mindful listening and self-awareness as well as the ways in which others have explored their own sense of call throughout history and in the contemporary world.

Cost: $250 (does not include books and other materials or lodging or meals for two in-person sessions)
