Workforce Boards

During the month of March, we're highlighting Workforce Boards—the community leaders who identify the needs of the local job market, oversee American Job Centers, and align workforce development initiatives in their area.

Workforce Boards do the critical work of coordinating with education and economic development stakeholders to administer programs that meet the needs of job-seekers, businesses, and communities. They define the goals for local service delivery systems that serve employers and people entering the workforce.

See How Boards Can Help Shape a New Normal for the Workforce for important reflection questions that boards can consider in the context of COVID-19 recovery. The questions touch on the experience and well-being of employees and customers, workforce capacity and capability, financial implications, and compliance and regulatory topics.

Later this month is an opportunity to join colleagues at the nation's largest annual workforce development conference. Join workforce leaders, stakeholders, and policymakers at the National Association of Workforce Boards \(NAWB\) Forum 2023 in Washington, D.C.

Request for Information on Sector Strategies to Meet Critical Workforce Needs Across Industries

The U.S. Department of Labor Employment and Training Administration (ETA) has published a Request for Information (RFI) for information on current and planned local and regional sector strategies and partnership models. The RFI seeks input on developing sector strategy models that address the workforce needs of specific industry sectors within a local or regional labor market through a strategic sector partnership.

For more details and to read the complete RFI, visit WorkforceGPS.
