Carl Howell joins Greater Boston Food Bank as CEO

The Greater Boston Food Bank selected Carl Howell as its new CEO, who will succeed Catherine D’Amato on Oct. 1.

Howell has over two decades of leadership experience and currently serves as CEO at Community Teamwork Inc. in Lowell, an organization with over 650 employees and a $220 million budget that serves more than 65,000 individuals and families annually. Under his leadership, CTI runs anti-poverty programming for the region and works alongside numerous GBFB member agencies and coalition partners.

“Carl possesses both the practical experience of leading a large, complex human services organization and a legacy of lifting up those most in need — critical assets for this important role,” GBFB Board of Directors Chair Ted Truscott said. “Carl understands how economic instability contributes to hunger and has a proven track record of successfully navigating and shaping federal and state policy to improve lives. He will bring heart, experience, and a fresh perspective to our work.”

GBFB is the largest hunger-relief organization in New England and one of the largest food banks in the country. For more information, visit gbfb.org.
