

The Coronavirus Outbreak is a Referendum on Virtual Practice:
How Quickly Can Your Law Firm Get Up to Speed?

The impact of the coronavirus pandemic has already significantly changed the way law firms practice; and, those changes will be long-lasting and far-reaching, even as the outbreak is eventually controlled, and we all return to normal life.

If you're now being forced to operate a virtual law practice, when your law firm had previously existed as a traditional business, you're likely scrambling to get up to speed as quarantines take place across the world, and populations affirmatively engage in social distancing. Without another option, you're left to adopt a virtual law practice model, or risk the continuity of your business.

In this webinar, we'll show you how to get ramped up to a virtual law firm business model (both from a marketing as well as a technology perspective) as quickly as possible, with discrete tasks you can engage as soon as this week. It's not as hard as you think; but, you have to start somewhere -- start here.

Presented by:

Jared D. Correia, Esq.
CEO, Red Cave Law Firm Consulting
COO, Gideon Software, Inc.