

FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

Is there a cost?

No, there are no cost to families.

Do I and my child attend the workshops together?

Yes and No. You both will come to the same location but after eating dinner, the parents will be in one room for their workshop and the youth will be in another room.

What if I don't want to bring my child and I just want to come for the information, can I do that?

Yes, but we encourage that you bring your child. However, we understand that in some circumstances that may not be possible.

Can I drop my child off and not attend the parent session?

No, your attendance is important so you can learn how to support what your child is learning at his/her sessions.

What will my child do at his/her sessions?

It will be interactive. They will not have to sit still and have someone talk at them. There will be activities to keep them engaged such as role play, games, engaging discussions, video resumes, vision boards, field trip to college, etc.

What will happen at the parent sessions?

Parents will be introduced to the many options that are available for their transitional youth, and will learn how to access those options. College, employment, community resources, independent living.

What if my child is 18 years old or older?

They are welcome to come without their parents but you would have to register your child or your child register on his/her own. They can call the office if they need assistance.

Do I have to come to all the sessions?

We do expect parents to commit to all the sessions. However, we understand that circumstances can happen beyond your control. We don't want you to miss out because you may have to miss one or two sessions. We understand that the timing of the workshops may interfere with fall break.
