

California Consulting Makes On-site Visit to City of Livingston

California Consulting Senior Associate Sonia Hall recently visited the City of Livingston to provide direct support to city staff as part of our ongoing commitment to client service and success.

During her visit, Sonia met with Seargeant Jason Barkus, Livingston Police Department, to review their current grant list, identify new funding opportunities, and assist the department in setting up their Grants.gov account—an essential step for pursuing competitive federal funding. Her guidance ensures the department is well-positioned to apply for grants that can enhance public safety and community resources.

Sonia also connected with Jacquelyn Benoit, the Recreation Superintendent, to tour the site of the city's upcoming Park and Recreation Plex project. Their discussion focused on potential grant opportunities to support development and programming for the new facility—an exciting investment in recreational access and wellness for Livingston residents.

“Taking on a project like our Rec-Plex can be very overwhelming. There are many decisions that need to be made and funding sources to find. Sonia is a breath of fresh air. Her confidence and experience assures me that my project is in capable hands. I left our meeting having renewed hope that we will reach our finish line!” said Jacquelyn Benoit, Recreation Superintendent, City of Livingston

"It's always a privilege to sit down with local leaders who are working hard to bring meaningful projects to life. Helping cities like Livingston turn vision into action through funding is exactly why we do this work," said Sonia Hall, Senior Associate, California Consulting.

California Consulting is proud to offer hands-on, personalized grant strategy to support cities like Livingston in achieving their goals. We look forward to helping bring these important projects to life through sustainable and impactful funding.
