Yolo County Awarded $999,474 from BSCC Byrne SCIP Grant to Support Crisis Now 2.0 Crisis Reception and Sobering Center

We are excited to announce that Yolo County has been awarded $999,474 from the Board of State and Community Corrections (BSCC) Byrne SCIP Grant. This critical funding will support the Crisis Now 2.0 Crisis Reception and Sobering Center, designed to provide immediate crisis intervention services to individuals in need, offering essential care and resources.

The Crisis Now 2.0 initiative is a cutting-edge approach to addressing mental health and substance use, providing a safe, supportive environment for those in crisis. This helps reduce the strain on emergency services while ensuring individuals receive the care they need. The reception and sobering center will enhance local efforts to offer timely, compassionate support for vulnerable populations.

This achievement results from a successful collaboration between Yolo County administration and California Consulting Project Manager Brook Leighton, who worked tirelessly to secure this significant grant. Their teamwork and commitment to the community made this milestone possible.

“This grant supports the implementation of the Crisis Now 2.0 program, which will transform how we approach mental health and substance use challenges. This initiative will significantly enhance our ability to serve our most vulnerable populations,” said Lucas Frerichs, Chair of the Yolo County Board of Supervisors.

We congratulate Yolo County on this well-deserved success and look forward to seeing the positive impact this funding will have on the community.
