HCD: Transit Oriented Development Implementation Program

Deadline: Draft Guidelines available, open for public comment until May 8th; Final Guidelines released Jul 1, 2026

Amount: Grant or loan depending on project
Eligibility: Local Public Entity
Match: None
URL: https://www.hcd.ca.gov/funding/tod
The Transit-Oriented Development Implementation Program (TOD) provides funding for affordable housing development and the infrastructure needed to support it. Established under California law (AB 130, 2025), the Program offers two types of funding: loans for the development of affordable housing that reduces vehicle miles traveled, and grants for infrastructure directly tied to affordable housing development.
Infrastructure grants are available to local public entities and eligible tribal applicants. Affordable housing loans are available to those same entities, as well as to private developers. All funding is drawn from the Transit-Oriented Development Implementation Fund (TDIF), which is fed by environmental mitigation payments collected from development projects under CEQA.
The Program works by functioning as a mitigation bank — when a development project is determined to have a significant transportation impact under CEQA, the project applicant may satisfy that mitigation requirement by contributing funds to the TDIF. Those contributions are then directed toward affordable housing and infrastructure projects that reduce vehicle miles traveled in the region. Contributions are non-refundable and do not entitle the applicant to any repayment or financial interest.
Funding is awarded through a Notice of Funding Availability (NOFA) process. However, the flow of funds into the Program depends on Lead Agencies — not the Department — first determining that a project requires VMT mitigation and that a financial contribution to the TDIF is the appropriate mitigation method.
