

Invitation to World Water Week 2022!

The Office of Community Services (OCS) at the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services is inviting you to our week of events in recognition of World Water Week 2022, taking place next week! OCS is reaching out with this invitation based on your potential interest in water- and wastewater-related policy and programming. OCS operates the Low Income Household Water Assistance Program (LIHWAP), the first-ever federally funded water affordability program.

The theme for our 2022 World Water Week programming is The Unseen Value of Water. Virtual events will take place every day next week, from August 22 through 26, starting at 2:00pm ET. More information on each day's programs is available in this Dear Colleague Letter OCS published this month. Registration information for the Zoom events is also available at that link. OCS has set up a webpage with detailed information on the panelists, moderators, and hosts for each day. This World Water Week site is available here.

If you are interested in signing up for future emails, please join our LIHWAP Stakeholders email list at this link.

We appreciate your work in the water and wastewater fields and know that next week's events will be informative and inspirational. Thank you for all you do, and we look forward to seeing you online for World Water Week 2022!
