Name: KeeSean Johnson
Evaluator: Ryan Hollern (former area scout/Bills, Saints)
Posn: WR #3
School: Fresno State
Games viewed: UCLA (18), Toledo (18), 2017 highlight
Strengths: Hands, ball skills, foot quickness, production
Weaknesses: Long speed, acceleration
Analysis: Johnson is the current college football leader with a 40 consecutive games catch streak. The fifth-year senior has amassed ludicrous numbers so far during his career, making 206 grabs for over 2,500 yards and 19 TDs in the Bulldogs' spread offense. He has average size but plus length (listed 6'2, 199). More-quick-than-fast prospect who doesn't accelerate to stack well running verticals. Best attribute is his hands. Glue. This kid snags everything. For not being the biggest guy, showcases the ability to consistently make contested catches. Has the ability to track, adjust late and contort his body to position and snatch. Routes aren't as explosive as I would like. He builds to burst and offsets using different speeds attacking technique. Vision, feel for blocks and reading defenders angles help him gain RAC. Overall, has the make-up to be a productive slot WR. Love his hands and ball skills. Lacking top-end speed is a concern, but not a deal-breaker for a slot type. Having not been used as a punt or kick returner lowers his value. No. 4 receiver who I don't see moving up the depth chart, but who can run with his role.
Notes: Great ball skills, but I wish he ran faster. Receivers really do need to "fit" with their team to have success. There are just so many of them, and unless you're a true No. 1-type guy, fit is so important. Work on his 40 time, and also fielding punts/ kickoffs. The more he can do, the better his odds of sticking.
Projection: 5^{th}-6^{th} round
