

BOSTON UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF PUBLIC HEALTH PRACTICUM SCHOLAR AWARD PROGRAM

Preparing graduates for success in the field of public health.

About the Award

Boston University School of Public Health (BUSPH) is pleased to announce a new Practicum Scholar Award beginning in Summer 2018 to fund students who embark on unpaid internships at nonprofits, NGOs, governmental and public health agencies dedicated to improving the health of domestic and global populations. As a practice-based school of public health, BUSPH is committed to fostering experiential learning activities to better prepare our graduates to be successful in the world of work.

Information for Students

MPH students will have the chance to be awarded up to $2,000 through a competitive selection process. Practicum Scholar Awards will be considered for practicums beginning after May 14, 2018. To be eligible, you must be a current student at BUSPH with a minimum GPA of 3.2. The practicum must be a minimum of 240 hours with a preference for longer engagements.

Expectations

Students need to have a practicum site identified at the time of the application submission. All standing BUSPH Practicum requirements, policies and procedures are applicable to the placement. Those who have already begun a practicum in a previous semester are not eligible for this award.

Award recipients are expected to showcase their practicum experience through a feature in SPH Today, writing a practicum report, and engaging with BUSPH community members for events such as a "Welcome Back" or "Practicum Showcase" activity. For more information, contact sphpract@bu.edu.
