Susan Nieland, CPA

Mentor – SCORE Chapter 203 Tampa, Florida

As a small business or startup, you need to know and understand your numbers, you need to plan for your growth and answer to investors and bankers looking to fund your business growth and you need to nail your pitch. You need an astute financial partner on your side to help you take your business to the next level. That's where Susan comes in!

After serving four years in the US Air Force, Susan attended and graduated from the University of Hawaii with a BBA in Accounting. Like any good accountant, she began her career at Coopers & Lybrand (now PWC), took and passed the Certified Public Accountant exam and became a CPA. She spent the next few years as an auditor before moving her career into banking and mortgage banking and eventually into working with small, fast-growing, entrepreneur lead SaaS technology companies.

Susan knows startups and entrepreneurial businesses. She is one! She was part of a successful $300 million exit. She was one of the startup executives of Revolution Money (funded by Steve Case's Revolution VC fund) that was sold to American Express in 2010. Subsequent to this, she founded her own CFO advisory firm to serve startups and small business owners helping them achieve their dream. Her passion is providing financial coaching and advisory services to small business owners and entrepreneurs in the areas of cash flow, financial systems and financial strategy.

Susan is known for consistently delivering high quality work product under tight deadlines, and prides herself on being an active listener, creative problem solver and developing interpersonal relationships with honesty, humor and respect.

Susan believes in small business, so much so that she devotes a substantial amount of her time volunteering with organizations that assist small business owners. She is a certified SCORE mentor through the Tampa chapter of SCORE, a mentor and committee member for the Tampa Bay WaVE and a mentor for USF's Student Innovation Incubator.

Jeff Baughman Resource – SCORE Chapter 203 Tampa, Florida

Jeffrey Baughman practices corporate law with a focus on corporate, regulatory and transactional matters. His clients include businesses, real estate developers, financial institutions and nonprofits. He routinely advises clients on forming businesses, mergers and acquisitions, transactions, commercial real estate, securities matters and taxation.

Jeff is known for organizing complex deals and his ability to create win-win solutions for all parties. As a U.S. Army veteran, he brings the same mission-first focus and history of service to his legal work that he did to serving his country.

Jeff ran his own law firm for six years, managing a staff of five that handled corporate and real estate transactions, regulatory compliance for financial businesses, business litigation—including appeals—and defense of federal administrative law matters.

Between that and joining AEGIS Law, Jeff divided his time between an of counsel position at a Tampa-area law firm, handling complex real estate matters, and a general counsel position for Veterans Alternative, a nonprofit dedicated to helping combat veterans heal and adapt to civilian life. Jeff's interest in veterans' issues grows out of his time leading a light infantry squad for the U.S. Army's 10th Mountain Division, including during deployment to Bosnia-Herzegovina.

Jeff is also involved in community service related to veterans' issues, serving as a volunteer mentor for the Hillsborough County Veterans Treatment Court. In addition, he volunteers as a business mentor and resource for SCORE of Pinellas County, a nonprofit dedicated to incubating small businesses.

In his spare time, Jeff practices and teaches Brazilian jiu jitsu
