

Grassroots Advocacy Still Wins Battles

Proof That Grassroots Advocacy Still Works

Every freedom that motorcyclists enjoy today has something in common.

Someone fought for it. Someone attended the hearing. Someone wrote the letter.
Someone met with lawmakers.

Someone refused to accept that riders should simply take whatever government or special interests decided was best for them.

The rights we enjoy today were not given to us.

They were earned. And they were protected by grassroots activists willing to become involved.

That same model still works today.

Across the country, motorcyclists' rights advocates continue to defeat bad legislation, influence policy, protect rider freedoms, and prove that organized riders can still make a difference.

Meeting of the Minds is where those advocates come together.

- It is where successful strategies are shared.
- It is where riders learn how to become more effective voices for motorcycling.
- It is where the next victories begin.

The challenges facing motorcyclists are real.

So is our ability to overcome them.
