

Marina Bykova is Managing Partner with the MB Project GmbH in Vienna, Austria.

She is an executive with over 25 years of unique fintech and banking experience, which has helped her create and maintain a worldwide network of international contacts and relations across financial institutions, corporations, investors and startups. She gained an impeccable professional reputation and trust from her private and corporate clients in Credit Suisse, Sberbank, Multi-Family Office in Vienna and Citi (Russia and USA).

She started her banking career as Chief Financial Officer, and then subsequently continued in M&A and Corporate Banking. Throughout her career Marina always supported the principals of sustainable lending and promoted the projects with positive environmental or climate benefits.

Marina also is a teaching professor of RANEPA in Moscow/Russia where she offers class of Private Banking and Disruptive Banking. Both classes include the chapter for Sustainability Principles in Banking.

She is working with innovations in technology and really believes that sustainability is a catalyst and one of the key drivers for innovation in many industries. It is important for her to be part of a bigger community which not only shares the same values and ideas but also could make an action and change.

bykovam@yahoo.com