

Jane Mulatz is MPA, Director, Strategy & Accreditations, at Sobey School of Business at Saint Mary's University, Halifax, Canada.

Over nearly 20 years of progressive experience in higher education, Jane has coordinated and facilitated multi-stakeholder consultation processes for various initiatives including accreditation, governance processes, strategic planning and program development. She has developed and implemented policy, impact, evaluation and program frameworks and led change processes including those that impacted governance, staffing and programming. Jane (as Director of Strategy & Accreditation) is responsible for maintaining AACSB accreditation and securing EQUIS accreditation for the Sobey School of Business at Saint Mary's University in Halifax, Canada. In 2016, Jane shepherded the Sobey School through the Business School Impact System (BSIS) process and has served as project lead on the Sobey School's PRME commitment since 2014.

She shares with us:

"Over the past 5 years, our School has engaged in a process of embedding an 'entrepreneurial mindset' into all of our activities and it has been quite transformative. We would like to build on those processes and skill by turning our attention to the Sustainability Mindset. By participating in the PRME Working Group and leveraging the on-campus experience we believe that we could have similar results and truly transform our students, faculty and stakeholders into generators of sustainable value."
