

#Giving Tuesday

On December 1, 2020, people around the world are coming together to tap into the power of human connection to strengthen communities and change our world. Will you be one of them?

The Public Health Museum will be participating in GivingTuesday and we need your support!

By joining the GivingTuesday movement, you're proving that in times of uncertainty, generosity can bring the whole world together. As is true for organizations worldwide, the COVID-19 pandemic has created significant financial stress. It has forced us to close the Museum to the public for the majority of the year, cancel our signature programming such as National Public Health Week events, and transition Outbreak!, our summer program for high school students, from an in-person experience to a virtual one. However, we are doing whatever we can to continue our mission to preserve the past, inspire the next generation of practitioners, educate the public, and advance the future of public health through partnerships with a host of community organizations.

Your support will allow the museum to continue the preservation of our collections, indoor and outdoor walking tours, and our dynamic educational programming as we collectively grapple with the pandemic.

Here is how you can get ready to give:

1. Mark your calendar for December 1st!
2. Give. On December 1st, go here to donate.
3. Spread the word. Encourage your friends and family to join you in creating real impact on December 1st by sharing what our mission means to you and why you support the Public Health Museum. Make sure to use hashtag #GivingTuesday and tag us so we can share!

Let's rally together to build stronger communities and expand public awareness of the significance and history of public health!

Sincerely,

The Public Health Museum
