

NYU

RORY MEYERS
COLLEGE OF NURSING

One post-doctoral research fellow position is open at the New York University Rory Meyers College of Nursing. This individual will work with the team of Dr. Bei Wu, Dean's Professor in Global Health, Co-Director at NYU Aging Incubator.

Job responsibilities:

The successful candidate will work collaboratively with an interdisciplinary team on population-based projects pertaining to aging and global health. There are opportunities for presentations, authorship of research manuscripts, mentorship support, and career development arising from this work. The research includes both epidemiology and intervention studies.

Qualifications

- doctoral degree in gerontology, nursing, public health, or other related disciplines
- experience in manuscript preparations, publications, and grant proposals
- strong ability in analyzing large epidemiological data and familiarity with longitudinal methods
- self-motivated, detail-oriented, responsible, and team-oriented with excellent interpersonal and communication skills and the ability to synthesize literature
- experience applying statistical methods to social behavioral data, familiarity with aging and global health literature, demonstrate enthusiasm for innovative methods
- experience with international research preferred

Note: For international applicants, NYU can only sponsor J-1 visa

Contact person:

Bei Wu, PhD. Email: bei.wu@nyu.edu

Position open date: Negotiable