

geriatric pain.org

Resources and tools for quality pain care

GeriatricPain.org is a one-stop website with FREE best-practice tools and resources that support recommendations for quality pain assessment and management in older adults.

This long-standing resource has recently undergone a major structural and content update to enhance user-friendliness and access to available tools.

The website is organized into three sections with resources targeted to different audiences: clinicians, older adults, and family caregivers. Each section has tailored content that includes Pain Assessment, Pain Management, Pain Education, Communication with Healthcare Providers, and Organizational Resources.

The goal of GeriatricPain.org is to improve pain outcomes for older adults by:

- increasing knowledge on best practices for pain assessment and management in older adults.
- providing ready access to FREE current evidence-based tools and resources.
- assisting clinicians to educate older adults and their family caregivers about assessing pain, managing pain, and effectively communicating with their healthcare providers about their pain.
- assisting healthcare educators to support their students learning about pain assessment and management in older adults.

Access the FREE pain tools and resources at

www.GeriatricPain.org

For more information, please contact us at Csomay-Center@uiowa.edu

