Well-deserved gifts

I had something AMAZING I was going to write about today for this week's newsletter. But on my way to my office, I forgot all about whatever-it-was, because I had the BEST idea ever. I'm talented that way. I have lots of great ideas. Better ideas than anyone else has ever had. That's why you're lucky to have me.

Now that it's perfectly acceptable for the president to take a $400 million ~~bribe~~ gift from a foreign country as his family is making deals to build multi-billion-dollar golf resorts, I think I should be able to take ~~bribes~~ gifts like that too.

I know I'm not a president, and that what I do is nowhere near as important as presidentry, but I deserve something, especially since you all are saving us so much money by doing things like gardening and cleaning the restrooms.

I've been thinking the bed of my truck is a little short for my purposes, and now that it has 62,000 miles on its odometer, I should have a new one. Soon. For the summer. With a super-long bed. And a sunroof. All trucks should have sunroofs.

Jesus wants me to have a sunroof.

See what I did there? THIS is why I like theologitating.

I have the best job.

In Peace,
Rev Denis
