Dear Friends,

Amber and I had a great response to Sunday's service: folks loved the sharing of literature in multiple voices. So we'd like to curate another Harvest of Words service sometime next year with YOUR contributions of poems and short prose pieces. Please notice gems you already love as well as new delights you find as you read.

If you attended, you got to hear my one joke. But how about an additional Harvest of jokes and funny stories either from your life, heard in conversations, or found in print? Are there enough jokesters among us to make this happen? Let's include music too. (As I was thinking about this,"Keep YourSunnyside Up" from the 1920s popped into my mind.
YouTube version: https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=PaD-loHsDqQ Hopefully you'll find music more current!)

Finally, a link to our poem "Ode to Digging Potatoes," which was inadvertently left out of the electronic and paper handout, appears in this week's newlstter.

We in Worship love to hear your comments, appraisals, and suggestions for future speakers and services.
