I was skeptical, but I reported our dangerous uncontrolled intersection, anyway. Within a couple of weeks, stop signs and "stop sign ahead" signs are going up! Amazing that the city actually listens to citizen inquiries, and acts so quickly on them.

Awhile back I reported the speeding driver issue on our street. About 3 or 4 weeks later i got a call from Portland Police with an recap of their progress from increased patrols. It was nice. We also got stop signs installed at the uncontrolled intersections at both ends a number of months later. That helped a lot. Very pleased with the response by using the channels provided by the City to report issues.

I've had a few potholes filled this way too! Admittedly they just use the cold pack asphalt, so it goes away after the first big storm, but it still counts.

I've gotten an update from the city. Apparently a surveyor was out at the intersection (meaning that the PDX Reporter worked) however it was the determination of the surveyor that a stop sign is not recommended for our intersection after all. They cite only two accidents having occurred at the intersection between 2010 and 2014 and apparently that doesn't meet the threshold in qualifying for a controlled intersection. I'm reserving my opinions, because I'm a gentleman.
