I can't say enough about how impressed I am with Apollo Drain and Rooter. This company has saved me from two very stressful situations. When thick tree roots blocked my pipes from emptying into the city's sewer line, every toilet, tub, shower and sink in my house was unusable. I had guests from out of state, and I was desperate, to say the least. Upon the recommendation of a friend, I called Apollo and John was here within 2 hours. He had my plumbing running smoothly within 45 minutes!

Seven months later, John was back at my house when a pipe leading from my pool to the pump got clogged. I called four pool repair companies and only one was willing to attempt to fix it. Their recommendation was to tear out all the concrete above the blocked pipe, unclog it, and pour new cement. I was horrified at the idea and asked John to take a look before I committed to this expensive project. He had that pipe unclogged within 40 minutes. We are beyond grateful! We feel very fortunate to have found an expert plumbing service that is honest, reasonably priced, and offers exemplary customer service.

Finding Happiness in a Three-legged Stool

*"I have heard tributes to health workers and truck drivers and others. Well, who are some of these "others"? During these unprecedented times there are many who are out working providing us with the essentials for our lives. I have heard tributes to health workers and truck drivers and others. Well, who are some of these "others"? I am reminded of a story I read in one of my trade magazines about the rebuilding of Iraq following the fall of Saddam Hussein. The writer commented that all the people wanted was the three things that are the legs of the stool that modern civilization sits on. Those three things are modern medicine, electricity and clean water and proper sanitation.

A three-legged stool image is valid because of its stability and the dependency of each on the other to hold up the stool. I think you would agree that if one of those three goes away, life deteriorates quickly. So, while I haven't heard any kudos to electricians and plumbers in the media, I am glad that I have been able and available to meet your plumbing needs during this shut down. Even though we have had some struggles with the COVID situation, let's be thankful for the blessings of these basic things we take for granted. In many parts of the world clean water and proper sanitation are not available. Happiness is a flushing toilet!

Hiding Out May Weaken Your Immune System

While it is important to do things to be safe like washing your hands regularly, keeping social distance, etc., it is also important to keep your immune system active. As I understand it, too little exposure to the environment can also weaken one's immune system. Each person has to make their own choices. I hope each of you is doing something to stay active and getting some exposure to sun light and fresh air. It sounds like we will be starting to see things get back to some kind of new normal by the time you read this newsletter. Have some fun and get out and celebrate!
