

REFLECTIONS

Dr. Kathleen Manges found comfort and consolation by reading the book HEAVEN as she journeyed through grief.

“While I was suffering the grief of losing my 18-year-old son in death, I received an email update that a new bulk resource was available, HEAVEN: My Dream of What Heaven Might Be Like. I had been reading several resources on grief and heaven. I felt led to order this book, which was originally published around 1898 by author Rebecca Ruter Springer under the title Intra Muros. This updated and slightly revised version by Jann Bach greatly encouraged me as I thought about heaven. As I read the book, I experienced God’s comfort through detailed descriptions of life after death throughout the book.

“As I read a section about how the original author saw Jesus tenderly carrying a 1-year-old and happily playing with children, I immediately realized the joy of heaven. I knew this book would be the perfect resource to share with grieving couples who had miscarried or experienced a stillborn birth.

“I placed a bulk order, 10 books for $20, to share with grieving parents. I also plan to share the book with my 80-year-old parents and other Christians getting closer to graduating into heaven. I want them to be comforted by knowing that earthly death will free them up to be face-to-face with their Savior. This additional resource, HEAVEN, is another way to plant eternal seeds.”
