As parents, we want our children to grow up to enjoy a personally and emotionally fulfilling life, a safe and secure home, meaningful activities each day, and being an active part of a community. Achieving these aims for a child with disabilities often involves planning for eligibility for public benefits and supplementing this assistance with private financial resources. We also hope for our children to live as independently as possible. As our children approach adulthood, it is also important to consider how best to support their decision making, whether through powers of attorney, guardianship or alternatives in between. In this program we will discuss all of these aspects of a good life for our children with disabilities.
