Once again, Senator Klobuchar is leading the way in efforts to protect older adults from fraud and exploitation. The Seniors Fraud Prevention Act would utilize the Federal Trade Commission's expertise in consumer protection to expand efforts to prevent fraud against seniors through monitoring the marketplace for the targeting of older persons. Having a dedicated office on consumer protection within the Federal Trade Commission is a common-sense idea. The FTC would share educational information with the elderly, caregivers, and the public on current schemes and how to avoid becoming a victim. The bipartisan Elder Justice Coalition commends Senator Klobuchar and supports this legislation. We hope the Senate will act quickly to pass this important bill and we commend the Senator for her continued leadership.
