

Sharing Possibilities in Self-Direction

Monthly Conversation Series

The New Jersey Division of Developmental Disabilities' new Office of Education on Self-Directed Services, together with Rutgers Community Living Education Project (CLEP), is proud to host a monthly conversation series on self-direction.

With a focus on person-centered thinking and planning, this cohort of professionals, self-advocates, and family members will meet virtually each month for conversations about common challenges and shared experiences. Whether you are just starting to explore self-direction or have years of experience, we invite you to participate, make connections, and shape the scope of our discussions. Together, we can help people build lives full of meaning and purpose.

Tuesday, September 6 | 12:00 - 1:30pm

What You Need to Know about the Interactive Map - and How it Can Help!

Learn how using the 'NJ Interactive Map' - developed by The Collaborative for Citizen Directed Supports NJ - can help provide you with strategies to find quality support staff. This session will describe the map, how it can be used to connect you to available staff, and other possible strategies.
