These pieces were compiled last summer after the passing of my grandfather, Lemora "Blondie" Krieg, following a long fought battle with Alzheimer's. Blondie was a craftswoman all her life, but near the end, she started projects she would never complete. Following her death, I received all of her crafting materials, including the knitted pieces and sequins you see here. So I picked up where she left off. Using her materials and some remnants from my time working in retail, I finished her pieces. Though she never got to see them, I'm proud to have finished what she started.
