Lynne Johnston

Lynne Johnston is a seasoned compliance executive and advisor with extensive experience helping banks, fintechs, and capital markets firms navigate regulatory change, strengthen risk management, and address complex remediation challenges. Her experience spans consumer and commercial banking, payments, lending, securities, and derivatives. Today, she advises organizations on leveraging artificial intelligence to improve operational efficiency, enhance risk and compliance management, and support sustainable growth.

Over the course of her career, Lynne has advised financial institutions on compliance transformation, financial crimes programs, third-party risk management, regulatory remediation, and enterprise risk oversight. She has extensive experience working with regulators, including the OCC, Federal Reserve, FDIC, New York State Department of Financial Services, U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, and FINRA.

Lynne previously served as Deputy Head of Compliance at Bank of China USA, Regional Head of Compliance for Commerzbank AG, Head of AML Compliance for RBC Capital Markets USA, and Global Head of Money Laundering Prevention for Lehman Brothers. She also served in the SEC's Division of Enforcement.

Lynne holds a J.D. from Vanderbilt University School of Law and a bachelor's degree from Centre College and is admitted to practice law in New York and Tennessee.
