

About Geraldo Rivera

Recognized as one of broadcasting's most enduring figures, and most recently for his delightful participation in Dancing With The Stars (DWTS) season 22, and as a previous finalist on Donald Trump's reality business show The Apprentice: Celebrity Edition, Geraldo Rivera is still best known as the legendary reporter for WABC-TV in New York who presented a series exposing the deplorable conditions at the Willowbrook State School for the mentally ill. These award-winning reports led to a government investigation and the institution was eventually shut down.

Throughout his career as a reporter, host and correspondent, Rivera has received more than 170 awards for journalism, including the prestigious George Foster Peabody Award, three national and seven local Emmys, two Columbia-DuPont and two additional Scripps Howard Journalism Awards. He is also the winner of the 2000 Robert F. Kennedy journalism award (his third) for his NBC News documentary Women In Prison and has received the Scripps Howard Foundation national journalism award for Back to Bedlam.

Prior to joining Fox News, Rivera served as host of CNBC's number-one rated prime time show, Rivera Live, where his critically-acclaimed coverage of the O.J. Simpson civil trial verdict set an all-time CNBC ratings record.

Rivera is a graduate of the University of Arizona and Brooklyn Law School and is the author of seven books, including acclaimed His Panic: Why Americans Fear Hispanics in The U.S. and best-selling autobiography Exposing Myself. His war memoir, The Geraldo Show was released in May 2018. He is married to the former Erica Levy and has five children, the youngest of whom Sol Lili-ana turned thirteen this year.
