

National Center on Early Childhood Development, Teaching, and Learning (NCECDTL)

Trainer Bios

Katie Miller, Content Specialist

Katie Miller is a Content Specialist, developing resources with multiple focuses as well as leading the transition to kindergarten team for the National Center on Early Childhood Development, Teaching, and Learning (NCECDTL). Her career in early childhood education has spanned 20 years and Katie's specialties include child development, transition to kindergarten, adult learning/psychology of learning, and social emotional development. She earned a BSBA and master's in early childhood education and is currently pursuing a master's and doctorate in Educational Psychology.

Dr. Jennifer Fung, Inclusion Lead

Dr. Jennifer Fung is the Inclusion Lead for the National Center on Early Childhood Development, Teaching, and Learning (NCECDTL). She is an educator, trainer, consultant, and researcher who has dedicated her career to ensuring that all young children, including those with disabilities, have a strong start to their educational journeys. Jennifer's background includes a master's and doctorate degree from the University of Washington, with specializations in early childhood special education, infant mental health, and adult learning. Her professional experiences with young children with special needs and their families include working as a special educator, behavioral consultant, parent educator, and family support coordinator.

