Subject: New Jersey Operations Regarding Heyco

This is a follow-up message to our previous communication posted on March 17th, 2020.

First and foremost, Heyco is fully committed to adhering to any state or federal orders to safeguard our employees and their families while maintaining our supply chain to our mission-critical customers. Heyco intends on being responsible members of the local community.

Based on the most recent information shared by health officials regarding the COVID-19 pandemic, New Jersey Governor Phil Murphy announced Executive Order No. 107, effective Saturday, March 21st. This executive order further directs the closure of all non-essential retail businesses to the public for the state of New Jersey. Manufacturing in the state of New Jersey is exempt from this new executive order and as of this morning, Heyco will continue operations and the distribution of our products to our customers, including our medical customers during this time when their life sustaining products are most needed.

As employee health and safety is our priority, we have implemented rigorous social distancing, shift separation, segregation and safety measures for anyone working in, entering or exiting our facility.

In the near term, we are not anticipating any significant supply disruptions. Heyco has developed contingency plans to enable the continuity of order fulfillment as this situation evolves.
