

Tall Cop Says Stop™ Announces Certification of the “High in Plain Sight” Training Program by the National Professional Credentialing Association (NPCA)

Tall Cop Says Stop™ is proud to announce that our nationally recognized training program, “High in Plain Sight,” has been officially certified by the National Professional Credentialing Association (NPCA). This certification reflects our continued commitment to providing high-quality education to professionals across the nation who are working to address substance abuse and community safety.

Founded by Officer Jermaine Galloway, a veteran law enforcement officer with over 20 years of experience in underage drinking and drug enforcement, Tall Cop Says Stop™ has become a trusted name in substance abuse prevention training. Officer Galloway is widely regarded as one of the leading experts on current drug and alcohol trends and has trained more than 105,000 professionals nationwide. His work has earned multiple national and international awards for innovation and impact in the field.

The “High in Plain Sight” program offers participants essential knowledge and practical strategies to recognize, prevent, and respond to emerging substance abuse trends. Designed for law enforcement, educators, prevention specialists, and community leaders, the training helps empower professionals to create safer and healthier environments.

Certification by the NPCA signifies that the program meets rigorous national standards for professional training and credentialing. The NPCA is dedicated to promoting excellence, integrity, and collaboration among professional certification programs across industries ensuring that certified programs like “High in Plain Sight” deliver meaningful, high-impact education.

“Receiving certification from NPCA is an honor that reinforces our mission,” said Officer Galloway. “Our goal has always been to equip communities with real-world knowledge and tools that can save lives. This recognition validates that mission and the quality of our work.”

For more information about the certified December 1, 2025 “High in Plain Sight” training program, please visit www.natproca.org or email info@natproca.org.

About Tall Cop Says Stop™

Founded by Officer Jermaine Galloway, Tall Cop Says Stop™ provides education and training to professionals and communities across the United States. With a focus on substance abuse trends, prevention, and enforcement strategies, the organization’s mission is to build safer communities through awareness and action. Visit www.tallcopsaysstop.com to learn more, and sign up for the monthly newsletter for the latest drug trends and information.

About the National Professional Credentialing Association (NPCA)

The NPCA is committed to setting and upholding professional standards in certification and credentialing across industries. Through collaboration, quality assurance, and support, the NPCA ensures that certified programs promote excellence, integrity, and professional growth.