High-Altitude Tips

NREL is more than a mile (5,675 ft/1,730 m) above sea level. The air in high-altitude cities is thinner, drier, and has a lower oxygen content than at lower elevations. High altitude can bring unpleasant symptoms such as dizziness and headaches. By taking these simple precautions, you can fully enjoy your visit:

- Drink plenty of water
- Rest and monitor your alcohol intake
- Pack for sun, rain, and dressing in layers.
