We feature the history of extraordinary contributions that African-Americans have made throughout our history. There is knowledge all around us and education gives people the chance to change the world.

Q: What is Black History Month?

A: Everyday really is Black History Month, but in February we celebrate and showcase the great achievements of African-Americans, past and present. In 1926, Dr. Charles Woodson started a celebration called Negro History Week that later became Black History Month.

Q: Why should I visit the Black History Museum?

A: The purpose of the museum is to educate our community, especially our youth, about the rich history that African-Americans have contributed to American society. Education gives people the chance to change the world. History can be interesting and rewarding for the entire family. Here at the Domini Hoskins Black History Museum, we make learning exciting. America is a melting pot of people from different ethnic backgrounds and cultures. Every person in this country should be proud of their heritage and they should celebrate who they are and where they come from. So in February, we honor our Black ancestors and educate Americans about the struggles of the African-American culture. We are so proud to share our history with you.
