WHAT DO I NEED TO KNOW?

- Participants will deepen their arts integrated practices, collaborate with a community of teachers and teaching artists from around the world, and receive instruction from international experts in the field.
- Participants will create 'high quality' arts-based strategies and techniques to meet the needs of learners in any educational context.
- The course will be delivered in hybrid form with a combination of online modules prior to and after two weeks of intensive workshops at Trinity College in Dublin, Ireland.
- The above dates are dates of travel. This program has online pre- and post-departure sessions in June and August.
- Students will be enrolled in EDCI688D and EDCI688L for a total of five (5) UMD credits.

WHO IS HERE TO HELP?

Linda Krakaur is the Program Director and will lead students throughout the program. As a graduate of Trinity's International School for Drama in Education, Linda strives to provide U.S. educators and teaching artists with the opportunity to advance a global perspective on teaching and learning in and through the arts.
