Rabbi's Message by Rabbi Beth H. Klafter

Last month I visited Christ the King Catholic Church here in Commack to speak with the seventh grade students there. Later in the school year Suzanne Richards, the Pastoral Associate there and my friend, will be coming to TBD to speak to our seventh grade students. These have become annual events as we introduce the young people (and their adult teachers, too!) to each other's religions.

I treasure these opportunities as we work to build bridges of understanding in our world where so often we focus on the differences among us. Before answering the many questions posed by the Catholic youth, I begin with the similarities in our religious communities. We all share the goal of reaching out to others with justice, care and love; we all teach that we must take responsibility for our own behavior and for improving the world.

Standing in the Church, I am able to dispel the myth that "all rabbis" have beards, wear long black coats and black hats. The students are always intrigued by the differences between their priest and my role as a rabbi. The students want to know: Can a rabbi be married? What does a rabbi do? Why did you become a rabbi? There are always a few who ask about yarmulkes!

Since these students are in seventh grade, their Jewish friends and peers are becoming Bar and Bat Mitzvah this year. In fact, a number of the students from Christ the King have been to Temple Beth David or will be here this spring to celebrate with their friends. The Catholic youth always ask about the process of becoming Bar and Bat Mitzvah; they are amazed that their friends can learn Hebrew. There are questions about Jewish holidays, food and customs: why do we eat chocolate coins and play dreidel on Chanukah? What are you allowed to eat? And does matzah taste good? One of the written questions asked, "What is Russiansauna?" I explained first that the holiday is called, "Rosh HaShana." On a more serious note, the students asked me if we have "reconciliation" in Judaism. I first had to learn what that means. Reconciliation is what I associated with the term, "confessional." This led to a discussion of how we seek forgiveness for our sins in the two different faiths.

My visits with the people at Christ the King are always rewarding and inspiring. I appreciate the candor and interest of the young people. Answering their questions about Judaism and about my own beliefs is affirming. I hope that in some small way I have opened their minds and their spirits to their neighbors. In doing so, I pray that we are able to join hands with those who may have different faiths and customs to repair our fractured world.

Cantorial Notes by Rabbi/Cantor Audrey Halpern

Dear Friends,

This month I will celebrate my birthday; so will Steve, and now that I think about it, so will Jonathan...thirty-three! Each year I have a flurry of feelings about birthdays – especially my own, to be completely honest. The numbers are becoming mind boggling and instead of thinking about whether I want something special for a gift, I think about how I look, how I feel and most of all, how incredibly grateful I am to be here. After all, though many of you may not remember, it was eleven years ago that we didn't know if I would live or die. Well, I defied the odds, and little did I know that the greatest joys of my life were still ahead of me.

In her touching and often poignant book, "Becoming Grandma," Lesley Stahl speaks about the unexpected wave of emotion she felt when her first grandchild was born. "I was jolted, blindsided by a wallop of loving more intense than anything I could remember or had ever imagined." I get it. When Becca went into labor in upstate New York, we piled into the car and set off for what was to be a life-changing adventure. We played games in our hotel room with our other kids who made the trek and when we were finally summoned to the hospital, Dan called us right into the delivery room where we dutifully brought our daughter-in-law the craziest combination of food I'd ever seen. But there he was, Miles – all nine pounds, four ounces of him and there they were - stunned by the labor, the birth and the magnificent little being that was now at the center of our family! We took turns holding him, marveling at him and falling in love, one by one, as Becca and Dan generously let him be passed around only moments after his birth. It was nothing short of magical. That same instant love was followed nine months later by Ari's birth to Jenny and Jon and then when our little granddaughter, Noa was born right in their NYC apartment only six months ago!

Why do I tell you about my becoming the "Mimi" of my own family? Because I, like Lesley Stahl, have sensed a cultural shift that is so subtle and so powerful that I thank God every day for the unparalleled joys I am blessed to be here to relish. It is, to be sure being Mimi to these three delicious babies, but it is also to be able to remain an engaged professional woman. This baby boomer generation of which I am a part, is forging new territory as we remain a powerful and productive group that is growing in number every day! Lesley Stahl asserts that we are beginning to feel the influence of this substantial group in our culture as well. Hanna Rosin wrote in The Atlantic, "Youth is no longer cool – or at least its hold on cool has weakened." She cites numerous sixty – plus-somethings who have been chosen by fashion industry executives to be the new face of beauty.

So the take away lesson for me as clergy/wife/mother and Mimi is that I needn't worry about a few lines here and there. Being a cantor/ rabbi/counselor and a grandmother and an ever-engaged member of society is not a novelty any longer. It is the latest and greatest in the history of women and I, for one, am thrilled to be part of it all. This birthday, then, is a celebration of strength for me personally, but also for women in general as we forge new territory in our culture and our world.

Finally, I cannot resist the temptation of turning my attention to what the Torah has to say about the blessing of our grandchildren. They say there are no accidents and so, I must remark that as I write this we are concluding the book of Genesis. Jacob summons his family to his deathbed, knowing his days are coming to an end. The first blessings he offers are given to his grandchildren (Gen. 48:12-20.) In my own modern interpretation of this deviation from the traditional order of blessing, I believe that the love we have for our grandchildren is less complicated, freer and as Lesley Stahl agrees, "...a depth of pure loving you have never felt before."

My prayer for all of you, then, my friends is that you, too, will enjoy this blessing of another generation – be it as a grandparent, aunt, uncle or close friend. May these joys come to enhance your lives with their unique and captivating rapture!

SHARING JEWISHLIFE WITH OUR SENIORS FROM ONE GENERATION

From the President's Desk

My immediate family was all home at the end of December, including my daughter's fiancé. When I mentioned that I had a Hakol article to write, my daughter Emily volunteered to write about her experience of being Jewish in Colorado.

I have been in Colorado for three and a half years. The mountains, the air and the people are all beautiful. I would highly recommend a visit (and please reach out to me if you do). But moving across the country at 22 was nothing short of shell shock. There were a lot of things I didn't know or understand about being an "adult" and there were many hiccups along the way. I learned and grew from each of them. Maybe one of my greatest hurdles was learning and understanding what it means to be a minority.

Growing up on Long Island, in the Dix Hills-Commack area, I never felt like a minority. There were always Jewish kids in my neighborhood and in my classroom. I never had to explain Rosh Hashanah or Yom Kippur; in fact, we got those days off from public school! People understood that the Jewish Sabbath was on Friday night, not Sunday. And even though I am sure Jesus was a great guy, people understood that as a Jew I have no connection with him.

Then I moved to Colorado. I work for a company that employs about 5,000 people and I know all the Jews. All ten of them! For the first time in my life, I wasn't met with Christmas AND Hanukah decorations during the Holidays. Not only did I not get Rosh Hashanah off from work, but now I had to explain to bosses and coworkers what this holiday was and why I needed to take the day off.

Now, where I work and live, most people are not Colorado-born natives, so plenty of people have lived and worked in other parts of the country, where they had at least MET other Jews. However, most people still do not know much about our culture and religion. And so, began my quest to educate people.

My fiancé's parents are probably some of the most warm and loving people I have ever met. They would bend over backwards for a stranger in need. They are down to earth people who worked hard as farmers their entire lives. Their dedication, determination, and passion influences everything they do. I was the first Jewish person they had ever met.

What could have been a very awkward, very unpleasant exchange, simply wasn't. I was someone they didn't understand and maybe I fascinated them a little bit. We spent hours together (and still do) talking about Jews, being Jewish, Israel, our culture, our language, and everything in between. With them there is no stone left unturned. They know I don't judge them for not knowing and they are never afraid to ask me something. What started with my fiancée's parents, became a family affair. Soon I was explaining to siblings, nieces, nephews about Jewish holidays, why and how people keep kosher. (They still haven't grasped that I have never eaten bacon).

I enjoy teaching them Yiddish words. I never realized how much Yiddish I use in my every day vocabulary until I had to explain it all. Words like shmutz, schlep, mensch, that I had always taken for granted, they had never heard before.

My fiancée's family have now lit the candles on Hanukah. They have listened to me say Motzi over bread at dinner. They have come to a Passover Seder (the jury is still out on the Manischewitz). They honestly enjoy learning about Judaism. They love that I share what makes me, me.

I've taken to teaching people about Judaism with a grain of salt. Not everyone cares like my in-laws. Colorado is nothing like New York's melting pot of cultures, languages, and people. For one reason or another, there will always be people who don't like people who are different from themselves. I spent many years in school learning how Jews were persecuted. I thought I understood what it meant to be different. Truth is, New York is a pretty cushy place to live and be a Jew. I have never suffered any prejudice and I've never worried about hanging a mezuzah on my door. But Colorado has taught me what being different means and I don't mind it one bit.

Shirley Offman Religious School News

Spring is in the air? That's hard to believe considering the frigid temperatures of late! On the last day of January, we celebrated Tu B'Shevat, which is considered the first spring holiday in Israel. "Tu" is not really a word; it is the number 15 in Hebrew; ergo, we know Tu B'Shevat falls on the 15th day of the Hebrew month Shevat each year. This holiday is also known as the "New Year for Trees." The purpose of calculating the age of a tree comes from the Book of Leviticus in the Torah. It states that fruit from trees may not be eaten during the first three years; the fourth year's fruit is for God, and after that, we are permitted to eat the fruit. In this way it is necessary to know the age of a tree, so that we can know when it is permissible to eat of its fruit.

There are a few customs associated with Tu B'Shevat. One custom is to plant trees in Israel through the Jewish National Fund, either in honor, or in memory of someone. The Religious School has distributed tree order forms to the students and anyone may stop by the Religious School office and pick up a form. This is a wonderful way to show support for Israel.

Another custom is eating foods from the "Seven Species"-Shivat Haminim. These are foods described in the Torah as being abundant in the Land of Israel. The foods are: wheat, barley, grapes, figs, pomegranates, olives and dates. I think now we should add hummus to the group, post-Bible, because it has become so popular here!

In the Sixteenth century, Kabbalists developed a Seder that in concept is similar to the Passover Seder, but ascribes spiritual significance to the seven species. At our Fourth and Fifth Grade PACT Foundation Program we conducted such a Seder, reciting blessings and sampling some variations of the seven species. It was very spiritual.

Another contemporary element of Tu B'Shevat is awareness and appreciation of our living world. The students discuss the many ways society benefits from trees and how important they are to mankind. We talk about the value of reducing waste and the importance of recycling. Don't forget that the Religious School collects used ink cartridges, old cell phones and small electronic devices on an ongoing basis to recycle. We are always looking for ways to help our school and more importantly, our planet!

On Friday night, February 2 at 6:45 p.m., we are having our second Congregational Shabbat dinner. Following dinner, at 7:30 p.m., our sixth graders will participate in the Shabbat service. Everyone is welcome to join us.

For our upcoming Purim holiday, hamentaschen cookie order forms are available in the Religious School Office. You will find the hamentaschen to be "sinfully" delicious.

I hope this month of February brings warmth, peace, and love to all.

Spotlight on Sisterhood

As I write the February, 2018 Hakol article, we have just finished digging out from the Blizzard of 2018. Hopefully everyone has survived the last two weeks of snow and frigid temperatures! We would like to thank Glenda Kresh and Debbie Friedman for presenting us with a peek into Spring by hosting the Tu B'Shevat Seder which was held at the end of January. We enjoyed each other's company and had a "warm" discussion.

Thank you to everyone who knitted and crocheted the many beautiful baby blankets that enabled us to make a large donation to the River Fund Foundation. We were happy that these blankets were welcomed and appreciated by those who are less fortunate than we.

February will again be jammed-packed with many Sisterhood activities. To begin the month, the Cultural Arts Committee will be hosting a jewelry making activity on Sunday February 4 at 9:00 a.m. Our instructor will be artist Michelle Lesser, who will help us design a wire-wrapped tree of life pendant. All materials will be provided. Although registration is officially over, there may be a few limited openings, so please contact Toni Spring at 516-810-4080. Light refreshments will be served.

Then, on Tuesday February 8 we are having a Sisterhood Board meeting at 7:30 p.m. On Tuesday February 13 at 7:00 p.m. in the Social Hall, Rabbi Klafter, assisted by Cantor Halpern, will be teaching us how to make challah. This program is for old and young alike, so please join us as the rabbi shares her mother's secret recipe!!

Looking forward to warmer weather as we enter March, there are two Sisterhood events to mark on your calendar. The first activity, on March 15 at 7:30 p.m. is Ladies Night "Out" as we host our annual Bingo night at the temple. Please watch for more details via email and in Hakol. Our second big event on March 18 is the Great Harlem Bus Tour, stopping at the Apollo Theater, and following with lunch at Sylvia's. Buses will depart promptly at 8:30 a.m. from the temple. Continue to watch for additional details. The payment for this trip is due no later than February 10. If you have any questions about the trip, you may contact Toni Spring 516-810-4080. We hope we offer something new and/or different for the women of TBD to participate in. Please join us at any or all of these events. Don't be shy!

The US Embassy Move to Jerusalem

Last fall I started writing articles about Israel because it is often in the media but is not always portrayed in a positive light. This month I will focus on President Trump's recent historic, controversial decision to acknowledge Jerusalem as Israel's capital and the promise to move the United States embassy there from Tel Aviv. The main questions one might consider are: 1) Why did he do it? 2) Does this affect the "Peace Process" and 3) Is this good for Israel? I will address this first from Trump's and then from the Israeli's perspective.

Trump's position seems to be that he was carrying out his campaign promise and that he believed this would advance the "Peace Process" by taking a non-negotiable item for Israel and Jews off the bargaining table.

- His position is that he was acknowledging the reality that Jews have been in Israel for over 3000 years. They are the longest surviving indigenous people of that region. In 1004 BCE, King David declared Jerusalem to be the capital of the first Jewish kingdom. Jerusalem became the epicenter of religious, cultural, spiritual and political life for the Jewish people. It is where our two Temples stood, our prophets preached and all Jews today, wherever they live in the world, face to pray.
- Unanimously approved by both Democrats and Republicans, the US senate passed the Jerusalem Embassy Act in 1995. Every President since then agreed that Jerusalem is the capital of Israel and that our embassy should be moved there. However, fearing the move would jeopardize the Israeli-Palestinian peace process, the US never moved it.
- The reality however is that since 1993 the Palestinians, under the influence of the Islamic doctrine that once a land has been conquered by Muslims in the past it should always remain theirs, have rejected every peace offer (at least five) without even a counter proposal. Trump felt that Israel and the US would have nothing to lose by trying something different.
- Trump also distinctly said that 1) the US Embassy would be in West Jerusalem and 2) that negotiations for the sacred "Old City" (where our two Temples stood on the Temple Mount and the Western Wall is located in what is considered East Jerusalem where the Palestinians say they want their capital) would be left up to the two negotiating parties.

For most Israelis this decision was ho-hum. They know where their capital is and has been for the past 3000 years. Our bible mentions Jerusalem hundreds of times. The Quran, written 1000 years later, never mentions Jerusalem.

- Israelis are used to the majority of the world having an anti-Israel point of view. Many Israelis also believed and seem to be correct that the local and worldwide Muslim reaction to Trump's announcement would be more overblown in the media than it actually is.
- Since every country in the world has a sovereign right to determine its own capital, Israel designated West Jerusalem as its seat of government in 1950. They built their Parliament (the Knesset), the Supreme Court, the Prime Minister and President's residence in West Jerusalem.
- Most Israelis believe the location of their capital is their business, that it should be recognized by everyone and should never have been considered a bargaining chip, especially to a group that seems to never want to give Israel any legitimacy. They believe Trump's declaration to move the US embassy to West Jerusalem finally gives the official seal of approval to what they believe is merely a fact.

By an overwhelming majority, American Jewish groups from the right, center and left agree that Trump made the right decision to move the embassy to Jerusalem. Opinions differ on whether it was the right time. Whether you, the reader, agree or disagree, I hope this article is informative and promotes discussion.
