Future Remodelers Show Their Skills and Help Benefit the Cleveland APL at the 2020 NARI Home Improvement Show

(Cleveland)—For the past several years, the local chapter of the National Association of the Remodeling Industry, NARI Greater Cleveland has teamed up with students from two local career schools as part of an effort to attract more young people to the building trades.

This year is no different, except for what the students are building.

“The emphasis was primarily on birdhouses, but for the 2020 show we wanted to see how creative they can get making mailboxes,” said Kathy Masterson, Executive Director of NARI Greater Cleveland.

The two schools involved are the Polaris Career Center in Middleburg Heights, Ohio and the Medina County Career Center in Medina, Ohio.

Todd Mason, a longtime custom home builder and now instructor at the Medina County Career Center is looking forward to the project.

“These students are very hands-on and enjoy seeing their ideas develop, but the best part is how many of them are now realizing the economic potential of a career in the trades,” he said.

NARI Greater Cleveland covered the cost of the materials, an effort that is part of the organization’s Workforce Development Program designed to create business relationships and promote job placement by getting more young people interested in the trades.

All school projects will be raffled off to those attending the NARI Show, with all proceeds benefitting the Cleveland Animal Protective League. Cost for raffle tickets is one for $5.00 or three for $10.00, available at the APL Adopt-A-Pet exhibit at the show.
