

Amber Daigneault

Amber is the Aboriginal Library Services Coordinator for the Provincial Library and Literacy Office, a branch of the Ministry of Education. She works with the Public Library Planning Unit, focusing on developing, coordinating, and implementing policies and programs centering Aboriginal library services in Saskatchewan public libraries. She is the current interim chair of the Saskatchewan Committee for Indigenous Library Services (SCILS, formerly known as CALS).

Prior to joining the Ministry, she worked in schools and public libraries for over a decade in a variety of capacities. She is passionate about family literacy, adult education, Indigenous research methodologies, traditional indigenous art styles, and reclaiming her nehiyaw language.

Amber's family names are Daigneault (Metis from northern Saskatchewan), and Bellegarde (Plains Cree from File Hills). She currently resides in a small community one hour northeast of Regina, where she raises three children and a small horde of pet rats.
