

Since its inception in 1991, International Development Week (IDW) has been observed each February and celebrates Canadian contributions to international humanitarian assistance worldwide. IDW offers an opportunity to recognize and highlight the unique role Canadians play in building a better world. It encourages us—especially our youth—to be informed and get involved in international issues. The Saskatchewan Council for International Cooperation (SCIC) is a coalition of organizations and individuals working to advance sustainable global development. SCIC works with Saskatchewan residents to catalyze Global Citizenship throughout our Province and beyond.

IDW 2022 is one week away! Be sure to check out Saskatchewan Council for International Cooperation's social media and website to stay informed on events and resources geared towards this year's annual IDW. Building on past success, IDW 2022 is focused on five themes: gender equality, education, health, economic resilience, and climate action. These themes reflect elements of Canada's international development priorities and the UN's Sustainable Development Goals. Find more info, resources, and a calendar of events HERE
