

Anthony Woodward

Anthony has been working in the library field for the past nine years. He started in an academic library as an embedded librarian on a satellite campus. He then went into the public library sector first as an information services librarian and later as a branch manger and eTechnologies coordinator, handling the library's website, intranet and social media. He moved with his family to Canada from Australia in 2014 to work with the Government of Manitoba as a Library Project Consultant. More recently, he moved to Regina in March of 2018 to work with Regina Public Library as one of the four new Branch Managers. Anthony is the Branch Manager for Glen Elm, Prince of Wales and Connaught Libraries. Anthony's undergraduate degree is in the Arts and he enjoys writing and drawing his own comics and making zines.

Anthony's interest in SLA

I have always been asked why I am interested in libraries, given my background in the arts, technology and teaching. But it is these things that brought me to libraries. My interest in technology, my work with zines and comics, and my belief in the free and open access to information drive my passion in the library field. I am interested in how the field of librarianship and libraries themselves remain relevant in the connected and digital age and believe that librarians are excellent at working together for the right cause.
